Art II, III, and AP
Rebecca Witherow

The copyright issue is taken very seriously in the art department. NO artwork will be accepted for course credit that has been produced from a copyrighted image. You are strongly encouraged to draw and produce artwork from life (looking at actual objects, people, and landscapes or photographing them). If you must use an image, take the picture yourself, or change at least 6 things in your work. If you have a question about an image, see your instructor for clarification before beginning your work. Copyrighted images used for reference must be shown to the instructor and glued into your sketchbook. This is an issue of artistic integrity and legal issues.

Your work:

Your work should be your own. Instructors or other students may only make small tweaks and not do your work for you. Improvement takes practice and you will become a better artist if you practice your skills, fail in a skill, and learn from your failures. The instructor will use your sketchbook to demonstrate for you.

If copyright or student work is not done by that individual, academic consequences will be issued.
